

BNL, Mini-Semester, 2011
Mike Stegman
Deliverables

At the end of your week here at Brookhaven National Laboratory, you will need to complete the following:

1. A brief (3 page max.) written report,
2. An oral presentation to the group to be given on Friday afternoon.

The report and oral presentation should explore a relationship that includes (a) your own interests in science, (b) the Brookhaven National Laboratory research facilities related to your interests, and (c) a particular topic being explored at BNL or a BNL scientist conducting research related to your interests.

To accomplish this you should explore the BNL site (www.bnl.gov) for the information that will help you to complete these tasks.

Additionally, you can take advantage of the BNL library's online access to articles produced by BNL researchers that are also related to your interests.

The REPORT

---

A suggested outline of how to organize your report:

Introduction

- ✓ Outline your interests in science are (your major, any special interests).
- ✓ Introduce the facilities at BNL that conduct research related to your interest(s).

What's going on at BNL

- ✓ Expand on the types of research at BNL that are related to your interest(s).

Who's doing it

- ✓ If you can find someone doing research related to your interests, then discuss some aspect of that research that you find interests you.

Conclusion

- ✓ Provide a synthesis of your own interests and the research done at BNL

The ORAL PRESENTATION

This oral presentation on Friday should cover the material you have gathered for your report. You may, if you wish, prepare, in addition to the report, a PowerPoint presentation for this task.

MILESTONES

During the week, I will be reminding you of what you ought to have accomplished by each milestone so that you don't end up writing through the night on Thursday.
